

Kimberly S. Brown

I'm the Group Publisher of the Equine Health Network at Equine Network, LLC, that includes EquiManagement (equine veterinarians), EQUUS (horse health for horse owners) and Stable Management (horse farm and stable owners and riding instructors). In January 2022 we announced The Horse had joined our family of equine health brands!

I am an award-winning equine journalist who started working at The Blood-Horse in 1980 and spent nearly 30 years at that organization. During the last half of my tenure there, I created The Horse magazine and TheHorse.com.

After retiring from publishing in early 2010, I became Global Marketing Manager of Kentucky Equine Research. In three years there I led the development of the EquineNews.com website that won a bronze Addy for design, swept the American Horse Publications awards for the top two digital newsletters in their first year, was recognized for award-winning content, and scripted/produced KER's award-winning corporate videos.

I left KER and began working at my personal company, THIN Inc., then within a few months began working full-time for EquiManagement. I'm still editor of that veterinarian-focused magazine and digital assets.

Personally, I own horses, cattle (commercial and registered Angus) and a small poultry flock on my small ranch in central Wyoming. I serve on the boards of the American Horse Publications (where I was a former President), Academy of the Winds Montessori school in Lander, Wyoming, and on my church's leadership board in Lander. I also work with the Riverton Mineral and Gem Society and maintain the group's website.
